BUYER'S GUIDE

SELECTING THE RIGHT SOLUTION

Password Station is your one-stop shop for total password management

In a world where time is money, reducing the amount of time that your IT department spends on password reset requests while simultaneously improving the overall security of your company's identity management is a big win. There are a number of password management solutions available in an overcrowded market, so making the right choice for your company can be difficult.

Avatier Password Station stands apart from the competition in a number of key metrics that can be the difference between an okay solution and a fantastic one. Able to reduce help desk password requests by up to 30% by putting password reset capability into the hands of your users.

Password Station offers the following features:

Fast deployment with a point-and-click setup that requires no coding gives a timeline of weeks instead of months or years from purchase to full installation.

Easy to use for administrators and users alike, with a customizable interface and tools that enable 100% user adoption.

Advanced authentication options such as multi-factor authentication and biometric face, voice, and fingerprint recognition.

Security standards that exceed United States military standards will keep your information safe from all threats.

Seamless integration between all of our products (as well as many third-party products) means that you don't have to buy more than you need right now and that you can easily add on additional functionality in the future.

Fast deployment saves you time and increases efficiency

When it comes to implementing any identity management solution, time is money. Many companies such as SailPoint, Dell, and Microsoft Azure offer comprehensive products that come with a long wait after you commit to their product. In fact, these companies have lead times from purchase to installation that can take months or even years.

A password management solution is only effective once it has been implemented, which makes Avatier's quick deployment timeline of as little as six weeks an attractive alternative. There's no coding required to get started, and our products work right out of the box so that you only have to customize them if you want to. Furthermore, our products are easy to maintain over their entire life-cycle, resulting in a minimal cost of maintenance over the duration of your ownership.

Rest assured that your information is ultra-secure

When you are taking the human component out of the loop of password security, ensuring that password requests are secure is a big concern. Avatier Password Station can put your mind at ease. Our products are built to exceed United States military security standards, and are constantly monitored by enterprise-level static security scans so that the latest vulnerabilities and hacking threats are brought to our attention and addressed as soon as possible. We also work to keep our products on the cutting edge, constantly bringing new technology such as biometric authentication with face, voice, and fingerprint identification, and integration with a leader in multi-factor authentication into play.

A modular, cross-platform enterprises solution is easy to use and futureproof

Determining that your company is ready to implement a password management solution such as Password Station is a good step towards building a long term identity and access management solution for your company, but it is only the beginning. Companies that are still growing need to find a balance between breaking the bank on an all-encompassing solution, and purchasing only the elements that they need now while keeping their options open for future growth.

Smaller companies such as ManageEngine and Thycotic may seem like a cheaper solution on the surface, but once you dig a little deeper into companies like these you will see that they don't integrate easily with other products by the same company, let alone with third-party programs. Avatier products are designed to work together seamlessly while playing nice with offerings from many third-party vendors.

Every product in the modular Avatier Identity Management Solution can act as a standalone solution to fulfill a specific need. When your company is ready to keep growing, our individual offerings can be easily implemented alongside other existing Avatier products, with no programming necessary. Avatier products are designed to work on all major operating systems, and Password Station is compatible with all modern browsers. It just works.

Conclusions

With Password Station Avatier can reduce the volume of repetitive help desk requests for your company by up to 30%, freeing up employee time for tackling the real problems. Fast deployment times, our easily-integrated modular suite, and a user-friendly interface promote quick user adoption and a minimal cost of maintenance. Best of all, our zeal for security will leave you knowing that your identity information is as safe as possible.
